The Wrong Way to Challenge China

The printable version is no longer supported and may have rendering errors. Please update your browser bookmarks and please use the default browser print function instead.

This is an opinion item.

Author(s)	Jim Hoagland
Source	The Washington Post
Date	June 17, 2007
URL	http://www.washingtonpost.com/wp-dyn/content/article/2007/06/15/AR2007061501980.html
Quote	"China's rulers will use any blatant foreign "obstructionism" to whip up nationalist fervor and to focus resentment not on the lack of democracy in China, where it belongs, but on outsiders who would supposedly deny the Chinese people a moment in the sun. A smarter approach may be to let the natural pressures for diversity and change, which the Games will bring on their own, assert themselves inside China."

Add or change this opinion item's references

This item argues against the position United States should threaten to boycott the 2008 Olympics on the topic Darfur conflict.

Retrieved from "https://discoursedb.org/w/index.php?title=The_Wrong_Way_to_Challenge_China&oldid=5974"

This page was last edited on June 17, 2007, at 15:07.

All text is available under the terms of the GNU Free Documentation License.