

A Death Sentence Affirmed

The printable version is no longer supported and may have rendering errors. Please update your browser bookmarks and please use the default browser print function instead.

This is an opinion item.

Author(s) The Washington Post editorial board

Source The Washington Post

Date December 29, 2006

URL <http://www.washingtonpost.com/wp-dyn/content/article/2006/12/28/AR2006122801143.html>

Quote

“ "Still, there is something unreal about the cries of foul from human rights groups demanding perfect procedural justice from a country struggling with civil war, daily bombings and death-squad killings. The reality is that by the trial's end, there was no significant factual dispute between prosecution and defense: Saddam Hussein acknowledged on national television that he had signed the death warrants after only the most cursory look at the evidence against his victims." ”

Add or change this opinion item's references

This item argues for the position Trial was fair on the topic Trial of Saddam Hussein.

Retrieved from "https://discoursedb.org/w/index.php?title=A_Death_Sentence_Affirmed&oldid=4340"

This page was last edited on December 31, 2006, at 04:20.

All text is available under the terms of the GNU Free Documentation License.