

Forging ties with Iran

The printable version is no longer supported and may have rendering errors. Please update your browser bookmarks and please use the default browser print function instead.

This is an opinion item.

Author(s) Mark Brzezinski, Ray Takeyh

Source The Boston Globe

Date January 11, 2008

URL http://www.boston.com/bostonglobe/editorial_opinion/oped/articles/2008/01/11/forging_ties_with_iran/

Quote

“ Now that a nuclear threat is not imminent, the US long-range goal for negotiations with Iran ought to be to create a context in which Iran sees it as in its own self-interest to become more closely associated with the West and the international order. The US approach should reflect the mixed nature of shared as well as conflicting interests with Iran. The stabilization of Iraq, Persian Gulf security, nuclear counterproliferation, among others, should be cast as shared interests.”

”

Add or change this opinion item's references

This item argues for the position United States should negotiate with Iran on the topic Iranian nuclear crisis.

Retrieved from "https://discoursedb.org/w/index.php?title=Forging_ties_with_Iran&oldid=7211"

This page was last edited on February 3, 2008, at 20:34.

All text is available under the terms of the GNU Free Documentation License.