

Georgia's democracy delayed by conflict with Russia

The printable version is no longer supported and may have rendering errors. Please update your browser bookmarks and please use the default browser print function instead.

This is an opinion item.

Author(s) Seattle Post-Intelligencer editorial board

Source Seattle Post-Intelligencer

Date August 12, 2008

URL http://seattlepi.nwsourc.com/opinion/374614_georgiaonline13.html

Quote

“ Perhaps the biggest mystery, though, is why Georgia decided to take on Russia now. Of course, the situation had long been profoundly unsatisfactory from Georgia's point of view: Two chunks of its country - South Ossetia and Abkhazia - were outside its control and undisguised platforms for Russian trouble-making. But this state of affairs had pertained for the best part of 15 years.”

Add or change this opinion item's references

This item argues against the position Georgia should be admitted into NATO on the topic 2008 South Ossetia war.

Retrieved from

"https://discoursedb.org/w/index.php?title=Georgia%27s_democracy_delayed_by_conflict_with_Russia&oldid=8025"

This page was last edited on August 28, 2008, at 13:20.

All text is available under the terms of the GNU Free Documentation License.