

Lessons unlearned

The printable version is no longer supported and may have rendering errors. Please update your browser bookmarks and please use the default browser print function instead.

This is an opinion item.

Author(s) Orrin Hatch

Source New York Post

Date December 19, 2009

URL http://www.nypost.com/p/news/opinion/opedcolumnists/lessons_unlearned_5YTCIkOtVv8BaeztrGmk4N

Quote

“ "The MCA established standards and procedures for balancing the protection of national security interests and providing classified information to defendants as part of discovery. Ordinary rules of criminal procedure in civilian courts do not. They are designed to handle cases which involve criminal conduct committed inside this country, with evidence that is in close proximity to law enforcement. That evidence has a chain of custody and its origins can be disclosed without irreparable damage to national security interests." ”

Add or change this opinion item's references

This item argues against the position Trial should be held in criminal court on the topic United States v. Khalid Sheikh Mohammed, et al..

Retrieved from "https://discoursedb.org/w/index.php?title=Lessons_unlearned&oldid=10718"

This page was last edited on December 21, 2009, at 14:04.

All text is available under the terms of the GNU Free Documentation License.