

Net neutrality under attack by corporate hacks

The printable version is no longer supported and may have rendering errors. Please update your browser bookmarks and please use the default browser print function instead.

This is an opinion item.

Author(s) The Star-Ledger editorial board

Source The Star-Ledger

Date May 28, 2017

URL http://www.nj.com/opinion/index.ssf/2017/05/net_neutrality_under_attack_by_corporate_hacks_ed.html

Quote

“ FCC chairman Ajit Pai says he expects the ISPs to act responsibly, so regulations shouldn't be imposed on them because of hypothetical risks of abuse. Spoiler alert: Pai is a former Verizon attorney, and his perspective on this issue is that of a disingenuous corporate lackey with a short memory. Before the current rules were imposed, Comcast deliberately slammed the brakes on Netflix's streaming speed in 2013, leading to an exodus of customers until the movie website paid "an arbitrary tax," as the Netflix CEO called it. ”

Add or change this opinion item's references

This item argues against the position Net neutrality should be repealed on the topic Net neutrality in the United States.

Retrieved from

"https://discoursedb.org/w/index.php?title=Net_neutrality_under_attack_by_corporate_hacks&oldid=29459"

This page was last edited on December 25, 2017, at 15:57.

All text is available under the terms of the GNU Free Documentation License.