

On Syria, there are red lines and bad options

The printable version is no longer supported and may have rendering errors. Please update your browser bookmarks and please use the default browser print function instead.

This is an opinion item.

Author(s) Newsday editorial board

Source Newsday

Date August 28, 2013

URL <http://www.newsday.com/opinion/editorial-on-syria-there-are-red-lines-and-bad-options-1.5968090>

Quote

“ If the United States can't in good conscience stand by and do nothing in Syria, a limited airstrike would be the least bad option. Though the chemical attack has given Obama strong ground to respond, the United States shouldn't go it alone. Obama should assemble an international coalition to go along, including particularly some of Syria's Arab neighbors. ”

Add or change this opinion item's references

This item argues for the position A coalition of countries should intervene on the topic Syrian civil war.

Retrieved from

"https://discoursedb.org/w/index.php?title=On_Syria,_there_are_red_lines_and_bad_options&oldid=16818"

This page was last edited on August 28, 2013, at 19:22.

All text is available under the terms of the GNU Free Documentation License.