

Roll back net neutrality

The printable version is no longer supported and may have rendering errors. Please update your browser bookmarks and please use the default browser print function instead.

This is an opinion item.

Author(s) The Detroit News editorial board

Source The Detroit News

Date December 2, 2017

URL <http://www.detroitnews.com/story/opinion/editorials/2017/12/02/roll-back-net-neutrality/108247670/>

Quote

“ Net neutrality supporters argue that without the regulations internet companies will be able to throttle websites at their discretion and charge more for certain content. Streaming videos from sites like Netflix and YouTube, for example, use much more bandwidth than text only. But that’s not happening, and at the end of day it’s about who is going to charge the customer. Is Netflix going to charge you more to get content up faster or will it be Comcast charging more to ensure your Netflix service is uninterrupted? The current regulatory structure is best suited to allow market forces, not the government, to make that decision. ”

Add or change this opinion item's references

This item argues for the position Net neutrality should be repealed on the topic Net neutrality in the United States.

Retrieved from "https://discoursedb.org/w/index.php?title=Roll_back_net_neutrality&oldid=29466"

This page was last edited on December 25, 2017, at 16:20.

All text is available under the terms of the GNU Free Documentation License.