

Why Card Check Is Unconstitutional

The printable version is no longer supported and may have rendering errors. Please update your browser bookmarks and please use the default browser print function instead.

This is an opinion item.

Author(s) David B. Rivkin Jr., Lee A. Casey

Source The Wall Street Journal

Date March 30, 2009

URL <http://online.wsj.com/article/SB123837553079768121.html>

Quote

“Card-check supporters may argue that the activities of labor organizers, no matter how intimidating, involve purely private actions to which the Constitution's protections of free speech and association do not apply. However, the Supreme Court has recognized that certain government-sanctioned regulatory schemes can give associated private conduct the character of state or federal action, making the Constitution applicable.” ”

Add or change this opinion item's references

This item argues against the position Act should be passed on the topic Employee Free Choice Act.

Retrieved from "https://discoursedb.org/w/index.php?title=Why_Card_Check_Is_Unconstitutional&oldid=9287"

This page was last edited on March 30, 2009, at 12:45.

All text is available under the terms of the GNU Free Documentation License.