

Wrong on Timetables

The printable version is no longer supported and may have rendering errors. Please update your browser bookmarks and please use the default browser print function instead.

This is an opinion item.

Author(s) William Kristol, Frederick W. Kagan

Source The Weekly Standard

Date March 23, 2007

URL <http://weeklystandard.com/Content/Public/Articles/000/000/013/443halpk.asp>

Quote

“ “The Maliki government could falter. But it need not, if we do not. Unfortunately, four years of setbacks have conditioned Americans to believe that any progress must be ephemeral. If the Democrats get their way and Gen. Petraeus is undermined in Congress, the progress may indeed prove short-lived. But it's time to stop thinking so hard about how to lose, and to think instead about how to reinforce and exploit the success we have begun to achieve.” ”

Add or change this opinion item's references

This item argues against the position Coalition troops should pull out on the topic Post-invasion Iraq.

Retrieved from "https://discoursedb.org/w/index.php?title=Wrong_on_Timetables&oldid=9281"

This page was last edited on March 30, 2009, at 12:26.

All text is available under the terms of the GNU Free Documentation License.